

ASUS EeeTop PC (ET1603)

$1299
EASY to set up and use, ASUS's EeeTop PC is a good place to start your computing life. The all-in-one PC includes a 15.6in screen with the lot: Intel Atom processor, 160GB hard drive, five USB ports and touch-sensitive screen. Users can therefore access its Windows XP programs by simply touching them, or surf the web by pressing the links seen on the screen. The EeeTop PC also comes with a matching white keyboard and mouse, so the only thing missing is a CD drive.

ASUS: 1300 278 788, www.asus.com.au

Via Alley Music Balloon

$75
 This cute USB speaker lasts for four hours between charges and plugs into most audio sources. Comes in dark emerald green, lemonade yellow, passionfruit pink, red and black.

www.vialley.com

One Tru Luv tee

$29.95

Myer

Wahu Skim Ball

$9.99

www.target.com.au

Stylophone synthesizer

$39.95
 MUSICAL kids might be keen to invent some of their own music with this highly portable keyboard based on the gadget used by everyone from David Bowie to Kraftwerk and Little Boots. The modern Stylophone is a small electric keyboard and an official recreation of the original 1967 model. Players can choose between classic, synth and bass sounds, even adding vibrato effects to create some unusual tunes. This gadget runs on batteries and can be plugged in to an MP3 player to add flair to your existing tunes.

Latest Buy: 1300 528 378, www.latestbuy.com.au

Sunny Life beach cricket set

$49.95

David Jones or www.sunnylife.com.au

Nintendo DSi

$299.95
 NINTENDO's most advanced handheld games machine now comes in two striking new colours: pink and blue. But there's little doubt this console would have made the Christmas list even without a colour change, given the additions made to Nintendo's portable machine. These include a camera and funny ways to rearrange its images, access to the web, and the Nintendo DSi Shop that features downloads including mini-games and a Facebook application.

Nintendo: (03) 9730 9822, www.nintendo.com.au

Pictionary Man game

$69.99

Toy retailers

Olympus Mju Tough 6010

$399
 THE dog-chewed range of Tough cameras from Olympus has been around for a while, but this update adds even more to its rugged arsenal. Now a 12-megapixel camera, the sleek Mju Tough 6010 will withstand being dunked in water to 3m, being dropped from a height of 1.5m, and temperatures down to -10C, so it should withstand use by even the most accident-prone tween. It comes with new Magic Filter modes for added creativity and a 3.6x optical zoom. Available in red, black and silver.

Olympus: 1300 659 678, www.olympus.com.au