

Xmas gift ideas for HIM

A guy doesn't have to be a SNAG to enjoy a cooking class and James Street Cooking School has got a program of hands-on sessions to suit all tastes. Beer & BBQ is a good place to start. Fast and Furious Seafood is another popular one but hey, he might get a kick out of the Italian Favourites. Classes are usually three hours, at night, and cost about $115. And you eat what you make. Find out more call 3252 8850 or at www.jamesstcookingsschool.com.au.

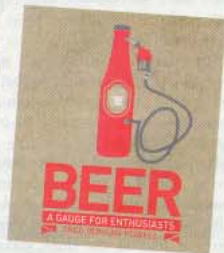

If your bloke thinks he's already the king of the BBQ, then get him his own Wiltshire 10-piece tool set $64.95 and cook's belt $29.95, both from David Jones.

Your best buddy will be able to tune into the cricket even at the beach with this funky Sunny Life Beach Radio exclusively from David Jones, $39.95.

Beer, Greg Duncan Powell's latest book, is one for enthusiasts keen to know more about the amber fluid, from how it is made to the results of Powell's own survey of more than 150 beers. Published by Murdoch Books, RRP $29.95 from book stores.

De'Longhi wine cabinets are for the budding connoisseur who knows his wine will taste better if stored in a temperature and humidity controlled space. The cabinet can be used for red, white and sparkling wines with independent settings. Prices start at $999 which holds 30 bottles. For stockists call 1800 126 659.

Bah humbug to video games! Real men can practise their wheeling and dealing on Monopoly's World Edition, Brisbane didn't make it on the board but Sydney is there and there's a timer for faster play. So play and dream. RRP $39.95, for stockists call 1300 138 697.

Urban warriors will like the Police Trooper timepiece made to look street smart and weekend ready and built to be tough. A choice of finishes, RRP $449. For stockists call 1300 652 525.

The Bullant Multimedia Electronic Earmuffs are made for DIY man who can whistle through his next project as he listens to the radio, music or takes calls through Bluetooth. $119 from Mitre 10.

Aveda's botanically-based products will satisfy his green consciousness and contributes to supporting Nepalese sustainability at the same time. Grooming Traditions shampoo, grooming clay and styling brush. RRP $79.95 at Aveda, Myer Centre, city.

